HOW THE TRUTH HURTS!

Elsewhere in this edition we publish excerpts from a letter recently published in a "Voice of the People" column in a Richmond paper.

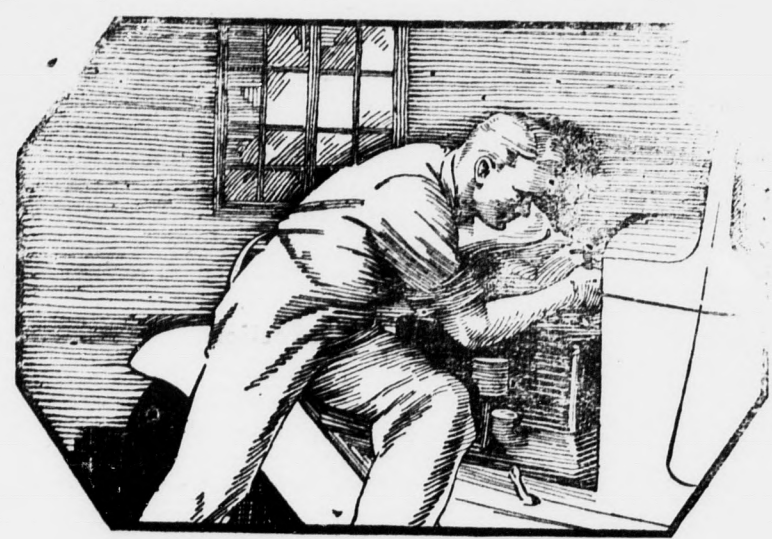

The bitter words of that article are not only a slap in the face to Appomattox but to the entire nation. A town the size of Appomattox must not be expected to bear the entire burden of restoring and preserving, and upholding the glory of a great national peace.

But, we are vitally concerned here at Appomattox, and it hurts us to realize that nothing is done to guide the tourists or historical student to Appomattox, nothing is done to tell him where to go and what to look for once he finds Appomattox, and thousands of people annually pass through Appomattox without having been able to actually find ONE THING OF HISTORICAL WORTH.

Were Appomattox lifted up and suddenly placed in New England or the Mid-West, for example, every automobile club in adjoining states would be regularly circulated with publicity material, double boulevards would lead into the sacred area, dignified billboards of huge dimensions would dot the landscape as guides to hurried tourists, antique furniture, guns, flags, papers and documents would be preserved in a beautiful museum, every building and lane that had one iota of historical significance would be accurately restored to its period, and not one tourist could pass through the town without having felt that he had made a worthwhile pilgrimage to one of the outstanding and eminently great and hallowed spots of the world.

Instead, here we are, with care and service at the sacred Surrender Scenes entrusted to the hands of an alert but inadequate group of small children, and even when we do make headway in procuring a beginning federal money for an appropriate "peace" monument, a hue and cry of "REVIVED HATRED" echoes from the beloved Southland.

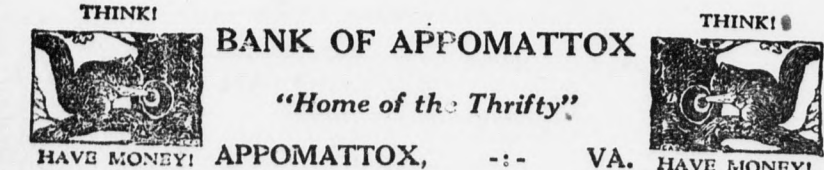

Great cause indeed up the valley of the historical James River and was hushed into a sob on Appomattox fields. From the war-torn ruins and the trail of readjustment, came a new student America dedicated anew to the principle of union, equality and opportunity. Destiny selected Appomattox, along with Waterloo, Yorktown and Chateau Thierry as one of the glories of that universe, how long, shall we blush with shame at Appomattox alone of these great spots awaits in the dismal gloom of neglect?

Writer Says Appomattox Is "Desolate Spot" Now!

Appomattox Officials Asked To Meet Governor Pollard, Nearby Counties Are Asked

Points To Neglect

A writer in the Richmond Leader Voice of the People recently described Appomattox as a typical Goldsmith village, deserted, forlorn to the untrained hovey elements and the absolute lack of any human preserving fact.

Does that make our face a little sadder?

However, some consolation is to be found in the fact that writer was speaking of Old Appomattox and not the present.

He writes further, "There are no signs on the highway, no signs on the through route, no numerous shuttle roads between the old and the new."

A swarm of children, led with folders, beseeches and fortunate a day to find the place and see the place where the battle was fought.

The chairmen of the boards of supervisors and the mayors of the towns have been named chairmen of local committees expected to be organized by them in all of these divisions. Each chairman also has been instructed by the Governor to add three leading citizens of his town or county to the official committee and bring them to Farmville.

Governor Pollard's party a Farmville will include: Jas. Winston Johns, of Charlottesville, Ben F. Moomaw, of Roanoke and Robert B. Preston, of Norfolk, members of the Federal Public Works Board for Virginia; Colonel James A. Anderson, the Board's engineer; Morton L. Wallerstein, chairman of the State Commission and Colonel LeRoy Hodges, managing director of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

With $3,300,000,000 of federal funds appropriated for public works projects in the nation, engineers of the Virginia Public Works Board believe that the state should obtain in loans and free grants more than $35,000,000. Many Virginia cities and towns and a few counties already have in-
